Former Baomei Restaurant

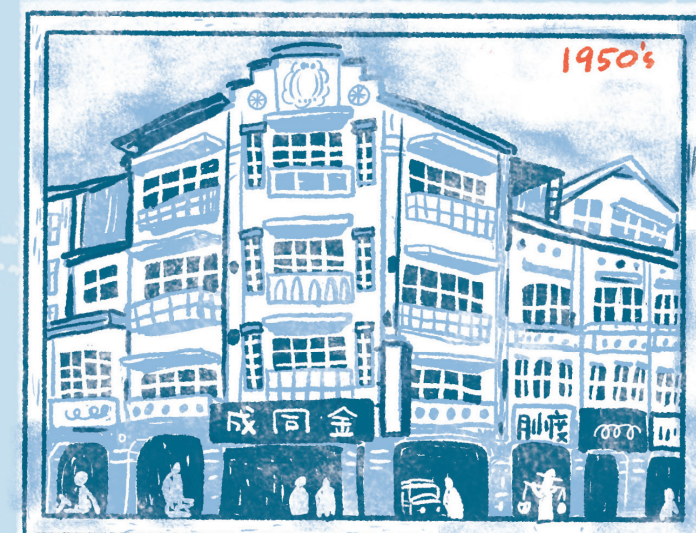

No. 315, Sec. 2, Ximen Rd.

"Kang San Lau Restaurant in Taipei, Baomei Restaurant in Tainan" Before the 1970s, Baomei Restaurant was a major socializing venue for Tainan's prominent and wealthy figures. The famous song "Remembering Anping" also has connections to this restaurant - the lyricist Chen Da-ru was inspired by the love story between a local Anping girl and a Dutch ship doctor he heard here.

Tainan Wooden Clogs Store

No. 318, Sec. 2, Ximen Rd.

Established during the late Qing dynasty, the store is currently run by the third and fourth generations. Wooden clogs can be customized and are practical, sturdy, and fashionable as well. The wood absorbs water, offering good ventilation to prevent Athlete's foot. As long as the clog is not broken in half, it can be continuously worn, only the vamp needs to be changed. Guests can experience making their own clogs here.

Jin Tong Cheng General Store

Starting from the intersection of Ximen and Minquan Road in the north, all the way south to Lane 228, Sec. 2, Ximen Road

A counterpart to Suehirochō, this main business street was located in the Honmachi zone (present Sec. 2, Minquan Road area) and was where the Taiwanese did business. Jin Tong Cheng was the name of the general store when it was opened by Qiu Tian-si during the Japanese Occupation Period. In 1940, he built a row of townhouse storefronts which connected twenty buildings from the Honmachi triangle window to "Poop" Hill.

Tainan Glory Embroidery

No. 186-3, Sec. 2, Yongfu Rd.

"National treasure" embroidery master Lin Yu-quan has been dedicated to this craft for over 60 years. Traditional embroidered pieces were mostly religious items, such as the clothing of the buddha, table skirts, Daoist robes, and embroidered banners depicting the Eight Immortals. Here at Tainan Glory Embroidery, embroidery art is combined with fashion, culture and creativity, and can be customized so that each piece is a unique artwork.

Wu Wan-Chun Incense Shop

No. 253, Minquan Rd.

Established in 1895, this hundred-year-old shop has old masters with 50 years of experience. They make incense the old traditional way and insist on using natural ingredients. The incense sticks are dried naturally under the sun and wrapped with red paper.

Chi Kan West House Restaurant

No. 10, Ln. 372, Sec. Ximen Rd.

The former owner wanted to let his mother, who had bounded feet, enjoy theater performances easier, so he built this western-eastern fusion style house next to a theater. The old house is now repurposed into a restaurant that offers wonderful vegetarian dishes with cherry blossoms in the springtime and mangoes in the summer.

Jin Quan Cheng Grocery Store

No. 284, Sec. 2, Minzu Rd.

This hundred-year-old store is located in a fancy baroque-like building. The old owner is still here with his ancient shining tools, selling all sorts of grains by the liter and welcoming the next century.

Rice Street (Feng Ice Fruit, Wang Quan-Ying Paper Mill, Xinxieyi Paper Store, etc.)

In the past, this street had a rice mill and rice store, thus the street was called Rice Street. Now the rice shop is gone, and after witnessing hundreds of years of prosperity and tranquility, this old street is welcoming new stores which use "the new" to revive its old prosperity and "the old" to preserve the old houses' memories.
